Growing Pains

Most of us have daydreams
When we recall our past.
We wonder where the time has gone
And how long it will last.
Was it only yesterday
That we were young and fit?
When though we played the whole day through
It never hurt a bit.
When we could bend and stretch a lot
But never feel a pain
And we could boogie all night long
Then next night start again.
Why do they make the stairs so steep?
That never used to be.
And why are cups so heavy
Because they're filled with tea?
It's time I stopped this grumpiness,
Complaining of the cold.
I must take stock and face the truth,
I think I'm getting old!
